MCS wins major national award

MCS Security has been recognised as the national 'Outstanding Guarding Company' of the year by the Australian Security Industry Association (ASIAL).

Established in 1969, ASIAL is the national peak body for security organisations and professionals in Australia. ASIAL members account for approximately 85% of the Australian security industry. These comprise of small, medium and large sized operations, through to major users of security, across all sectors of the industry.

MCS Managing Director, Paul Simmons said:

"I am delighted to receive this recognition from our industry peers on behalf of all MCS staff. Our goal continues to be to develop and deliver a bespoke security solution for our clients to protect their assets, staff or customers, no matter their industry. Our guards are just one part of our solution. Our guards are regularly trained on the most up to date techniques and security issues. This training means that they are ready to handle any situation. The award is a testament to our hard work and continued commitment for excellence."
